

MONTEBOURG FALLS TO U. S. 4TH DIVISION

WHERE COUNTERATTACKS SPAWN AS ALLIES ADVANCE

AS THE ALLIED INVASION moves inland to become the battle of Normandy and beachheads grow in depth as new thousands are landed on a well-cleared coast (shaded area on map), the constant threat of violent counterattacks by the enemy becomes a closer and louder sound. Shown here are the two counterattack hubs of the Nazis, according to most recent reports. In the west, where the Allied thrust from landing zones has resulted in capture of Bayeux and in a drive to the south where Caen is reported tottering (indicated by arrows from the invasion symbol), the Nazis are reported using Rennes as a depot for troops and supplies. And as the Allies threaten to cut off the Cherbourg peninsula, the Germans are also reported to be rushing equipment to Paris to carry on the battle for the Seine valley and adjacent territory from that city. Arrows from Rennes show the area which the Nazis are expected to defend from that center. Bombs indicate where recent heavy air attacks have been made by Allied bomber formations on the west coast of France.

The War Today...

By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

THE BURST OF SUNSHINE over Hitler's Atlantic wall and the English channel during the past 24 hours has given a fine lift to the Allied invasion, which came so close to disaster in its inception and had been so terribly handicapped ever since, because of the vagaries of a despicable weather-man.

The great Allied beach-head on the Cherbourg peninsula is so well established that even yesterday Allied headquarters was able to say the general situation was "better than satisfactory." (I like the note of reserve in that official thumbnail summary. It expresses confidence but doesn't burble.) We now have an 80-mile front with a maximum depth of some 18 miles.

That strip of coast—won by so much gallantry and sacrifice and superb generalship—is, of course, still more shallow than we like. However, it's deep enough so that the Allied troops are increasingly able to take the initiative, despite the great advantage the Hitlerites held at the outset in their powerful defenses. In short, we are getting ahead with the job, and if the weather-man will favor us, our Normandy victory garden will flourish.

One of the most important developments produced by the appearance of the sun was the really terrific bombing which the Allied air forces have been giving western Europe. Yesterday some 10,000 sorties were flown by American and British warplanes. They blasted bridges, communications, troop movements and what not. It was a field day.

Now the significance of this is that they were blocking the movement of German reinforcements.

Bombers Carry Out Heavy Assaults On Nazi Targets

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, June 13.—U. S. bombers from Italy struck long-range targets in Germany today as hundreds of other warplanes on the western front provided close-up support of American forces sweeping toward Cherbourg on the Normandy peninsula.

Italy-based bombers in strong force, escorted by fighters, penetrated into Germany from the south, attacking targets in the Munich area and at Innsbruck in old Austria.

Several hundred Flying Fortresses from England set the pace of the strategic attack by pounding German airbases behind the battle lines in France.

Lighter planes gave the beachhead forces tactical support by smashing at targets in the Normandy peninsula as well as far inland.

Supreme headquarters of the Allied expeditionary force announced five landing strips were in use on the Normandy beachhead. Yesterday's sorties from England and the air force totaled more than 7,000. In air borne operations last night, skilled air personnel and combat troops were flown to the beachhead.

Striking at the Munich area for the second time within a week, 15th air force bombers pounded airbases, factories and rail yards as well as oil plants.

Rail yards at Innsbruck and oil factories at Porto Marghera, near Venice, were attacked by other formations.

Lightnings and Thunderbolts provided the Mediterranean-based planes penetration cover while Lightnings and Mustangs handled the target cover.

The daylight precision attacks from Britain and Italy followed a night attack by more than 1,000 RAF bombers against German transport facilities and the synthetic oil manufacturing center of Gelsenkirchen in the Ruhr. On Gelsenkirchen, the RAF dumped 1,568 tons of high explosives and incendiaries.

German Torture of Paratroops Reported

NEW YORK, June 13.—Stanley Richardson, NBC reporter from London, said in a broadcast from London last night that there is "indisputable evidence that the Germans tortured and murdered" American paratroopers during the early hours of the Normandy landings.

Richardson, who had just returned from headquarters of an American airborne division near Caen, said in one instance the bodies of three American enlisted paratroopers, stripped to the waist, with their hands bound, were found in a heap beside the wall of a former German command post.

"There is every indication," said Richardson, "that these Americans were executed after they had been captured, in violation of the rules of war."

In a second case the body of a second lieutenant was found with his throat cut and a German army knife beside him. Richardson said that according to the men of the command post who discovered the body, the officer "landed in a tree and was murdered as he hung helplessly there."

A third case concerned a major who was found in a village "dead of multiple stab wounds," Richardson declared.

CITY'S BOND DRIVE OFF TO GOOD START

People Listen Attentively To Street Corner Campaign Programs

Salem's Fifth War Loan drive opening—heralded by two bands, a blast of the fire siren and nearly 2,500 people in the downtown section—got off to an enthusiastic start last night as Frank (Pat) Bolen, accompanied from corner to corner by the Salem High school and Old Timers bands, made speeches to crowds gathered at seven different intersections.

The procession started at the postoffice, went on to the State theater, the Lape hotel, to the corner of Broadway and State, down Ellsworth ave. and back up Broadway to State. Bolen spoke briefly to groups which gathered on the various corners and the two bands alternated playing patriotic music.

E. M. Stephenson, chairman of the drive, was highly encouraged by the turnout last night and said today that the drive was getting underway "with unusual success."

The goal is $2,235,000. The chairman reported several contests already going between clerks in the various retail establishments downtown. Each clerk has been allotted a $300 cash sale quota, and those who reach their goal will receive special citations from the Treasury department.

House-to-house canvassers are on their rounds and some very favorable news has been turned in on their results, Stephenson said.

Meeting tonight in Winona, tomorrow in Damascus, and later in the week throughout the balance of this territory will be heads and workers of the rural campaign, which is being directed by Chester Cow. Lowell Whinnery has been appointed co-chairman of the Damascus activities.

Citizens throughout the city are awaiting the first blast of the fire siren, which will be blown every time $100,000 in bonds is sold.

U. S. Forces Pound Away At Japanese East of Philippines

(By Associated Press)
American sea, air and ground fighters are tirelessly hacking away at Japanese fortresses barring the way to rescue of the Philippines and hard-bested China, Allied reports showed today.

Nimitz-MacArthur airmen, flying from land and carriers, continued their hand-in-glove assaults on the string of enemy-held islands stretching from Palau into the Marianas group flanking the Philippines on the east.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz reported the second straight day of attacks on Guam, Tinian, Saipan and other Marianas islands by a powerful carrier task force. Details were hidden in radio silence.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's airmen, taking off from newly-captured New Guinea bases, struck at Palau—300 miles from the Philippines—and Truk for the second straight day.

MacArthur's Allied forces also expanded their Biak island holdings against stubborn enemy resistance and, to their rear, maintained steady attacks against Japanese troops on islands stretching for 1,500 miles from Bougainville to Dutch New Guinea. Casualties in Dutch New Guinea, MacArthur announced, have accounted for 6,705 Japanese in recent weeks. Bombers kept up their daily schedule with an attack on Rabaul in New Britain.

In India Allied forces chased the enemy back near the Burma border and claimed victory in the battle for Kohima and were nearer full seizure of Myitkina in northern Burma. Chinese forces pressed on toward Myitkina against stoutly-resisting Japanese in the Salween river sector.

Chinese troops fought savagely to hold off a three-sided Japanese drive to capture Changsha, control point on the vital Hankow-Canton railway of south-central China. The enemy was within six miles of the city on the east and pressing "lose from the north and northwest." The Japanese in this drive have been credited with seeking to bottle up all of eastern China against future Allied use.

Three Up for Bank Theft

CLEVELAND, June 13.—Elwood McClure, 27, William E. Spencer, 40, and Marvin Lilly were indicted by a federal grand jury here yesterday on charges of having robbed the Girard (O.) Savings & Loan association last Dec. 15 of $332.

McClure and Spencer also are under indictment for robbery in the holdup on Dec. 3 of the Akron Branch of the First Federal Savings & Loan association of Mt. Vernon. A total of $1,640 was taken in that holdup.

Eisenhower, Churchill And Aides Inspect Battleground

(By Associated Press)
SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 13.—Prime Minister Churchill, often called the war's foremost reporter, has seen for himself how the battle for Normandy is going and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme invasion commander, has toured American-held sectors of the battlefield with the top commanders of the United States armed forces.

Eisenhower's companions on his historic visit of inspection yesterday were Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. chief of staff; Adm. Ernest King, commander-in-chief of the U. S. fleet; Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of American Army Air Forces;

Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of American ground forces in France, and Rear Admirals Alan G. Kirk and Gen. Leslie Hall, commanders of American naval task forces for the invasion.

Churchill steamed to France in the Destroyer H.M.S. Kelvin, which used its guns enroute to bombard a German position ashore. With him went Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, premier of the Union of South Africa, and Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the Supreme general staff.

During his visit ashore Churchill had a chance to see that this, too, is "a very dangerous war," as he once said about the last one. He watched a dog fight in the air and saw a German plane shot down.

The prime minister was ashore three hours. He lunched with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of Allied ground forces, watched troops and supplies being landed, then steamed home through a battle fleet whose guns even then were blazing away at German positions on shore.

(Eisenhower and his companions, including battered Isigny, wrested from the Germans only two days previously. They returned to Britain on an American destroyer.

The latest Moscow communique said the Finns were putting up stubborn resistance from prepared positions but had failed to halt the red army's Karelian offensive. The bulletin announced the seizure of Rautavaara about 40 miles from Viipuri, and Kivennapa, about 10 miles northeast of Rautavaara.

(A Stockholm dispatch broadcast this morning by the British radio and recorded by CBS said the Finns, "worried about the Russian Break-through," had begun evacuating Viipuri and various regions in the path of the advancing Russians.)

To the British people the Soviet Karelian offensive came as somewhat of a surprise, for many had believed Stalin's strategy would be to strike first in Romania in the hope of shattering the last vestiges of Balkan allegiance to Hitler.

It generally was conceded, however, that Moscow probably was guided by more than easy expedients.

Liverpool Man Injured In Ohio by Nazi Weapon

CLEVELAND, June 13.—An American was wounded by German armament yesterday—on Cleveland's public square.

The casualty was Alfred Van Dyna, 14, of East Liverpool, who was playing around a captured Nazi cannon with friends. Someone swung the barrel and young Van Dyna's right foot was caught in the breach.

Extent of the wounds: A crushed big toe.

Yanks Gain In Drive To Cut Off Peninsula

(By Associated Press)
SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 13.—The Allies in Normandy burst forward mightily on all fronts late today, with the Americans cracking Cherbourg's defenses by seizing three towns and driving advance patrols within 10 miles of the great port.

British troops in a deep-biting power drive outflanked Caen, eastern Bastion of the 80-mile battlefield, seizing Troarn, nine miles east of Caen.

Along the center of the flaming front, U. S. troops captured Balleu, and Allied forces plunged south of Bayeux in a "big advance" flanking Caen from the west.

By WES GALLAGHER

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 13.—Fighting men of the U. S. Fourth division hammering toward Cherbourg captured Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of the prize port, after a fierce battle, headquarters announced today.

Montebourg was topped even as other U. S. forces plunged several miles beyond Carentan in a drive to chop off the top of Cherbourg peninsula at the shortest point. By Berlin account, they were fighting toward airborne Allied forces already landed on the western shores in a pincers move.

Six U. S. divisions now have been identified as among those fighting with the powerful invasion armies—with perhaps 600,000 men engaged on both sides—and Supreme headquarters reported progress all along the battle front now lengthened to 80 miles.

Another American force driving across the peninsula between Montebourg and Carentan captured Pont d'Abbe, 3 1/2 miles west of the railroad running near Ste. Mere Eglise.

Berlin declared Allied forces were driving on the central Normandy road hub of St. Lo, and placed Americans within seven miles of the town. A front dispatch said the U. S. Second division has struck past Cerisy forest to the northeast of St. Lo, making the deepest inland penetration of 18 miles.

The Fourth division was spearheading the attack below Cherbourg in the area previously entered by the 82nd and 101st American airborne.

The American First and 29th division also are fighting in France.

600,000 Men In Combat

Estimates by both sides said 600,000 or more men were fighting on the Normandy plains, and the German high command announced the death "in the foremost line" of Artillery General Marks, commanding an army corps on Cherbourg peninsula.

On the eastern flank, Supreme headquarters said Tilly-Sur-Seulles west of Caen had changed hands several times. Berlin reported particularly heavy fighting in this sector, and said a wedge had been driven into Nazi lines east of the Orne river.

The Second division men, bursting into the center of the sagging Nazi line, "still are pushing forward" past Cerisy forest, and captured a huge ammunition dump near the woodlands, a front dispatch said. The Germans were falling back so rapidly they did not even have time for demolitions and placing mines it added.

Maintaining thunderous aerial support, several hundred Flying Fortresses hammered Nazi airfields in France today, and other planes hit battlefield positions. Rain lowered visibility in the English channel—the Allies' supply line—and the sea was choppy.

One Berlin broadcast said the

DRIVER IN MISHAP DRAWS TWO FINES

George Longstreth, 20, of East Liverpool, was fined on two charges by Mayor R. R. Johnson yesterday as a result of his "hit-skip" operation through Salem Saturday afternoon and a later accident about two miles northwest of town on the Benton road.

Longstreth was fined $25 and costs on a charge of failure to stop after an accident and $10 and costs on a charge of reckless operation, filed by Police Chief R. N. Stoffer.

The Liverpool man was involved in a "hit-skip" accident near the city hall at noon Saturday, striking a car owned by George Krings, and continuing through town at a high rate of speed. He drove out the Benton road, with a Salem driver in pursuit, and overturned, just beyond the railroad underpass, two miles northeast of the city.

He was released from City hospital yesterday, having partially recovered from ankle abrasions and contusions.

Death Is Confirmed

War department confirmation was received here today on the death in action of Pfc. Eugene J. Brown, son of James Brown of Salineville.

AFTER THE DEADLINE

The passing of D-day as the deadline for the intensive efforts which led up to it and made it possible will mark the transition from preparatory effort to execution in more than military matters.

At home, there will be an impact on war production, whose nature now will be dictated by current needs, instead of preparations to equip invasion forces. Thus, there may be in the near future a transfer of emphasis from material needed to launch the invasion to material to conduct an offensive. Depending on the trend of events, production programs will have to be shifted rapidly to make the adjustment to the actual needs of the fighting forces, in contrast with their previously theoretical needs for operations in western Europe.

Military officials have been aware of this aspect for a long time and have discussed it openly, but there is relatively little evidence up to this time that plans for easing the impact of a sudden change have caught up with military expectation. For example, a recent decision by the navy department to cancel a contract for airplanes with one branch of that industry apparently caught everybody concerned unprepared and uncertain of the next step to be taken.

While no one is in a mood at present to count unhatched chickens, it nevertheless is a fact that, barring disaster, the chickens are going to be hatched eventually. Now that D-day has ceased to be a point in the future and has become a point in the past, there is more urgent need to be getting along with the blueprint for demobilization when the time comes.

SOMETHING TO ACCOUNT FOR

It was dimmed in an anxious public's ears so often that Gen. Eisenhower and the weatherman were working hand-in-glove to put wind and water on the Allied side that repeated references to foul weather during and since D-day leave no choice but to jump on the latter with the vigor to which weathermen are by this time accustomed. They have something to account for.

They are the victims of a common affliction which also complicates the affairs of other experts. They have delusions of being the practitioners of an exact science and have foisted off the delusion on the public. Consequently, when the public learns better, as it invariably does in the course of planning picnics, outdoor weddings and critically important military operations, it is in a mood for recriminations.

The truth is that meteorology is not an exact science. It can tell us for a certainty what has happened over a period of years and what should happen tomorrow, but its spokesmen are subject always—like everybody else—to the unexpected. Average weather, like the average man, the average town and the average income, is a figure of statistics, rarely encountered in everyday living. On the average, the weather wouldn't have done what it did these last few drenched and seaship fighting men and frustrated days in western Europe, but that is no comfort to aviators.

RUSSIA'S ROLE

Reports from Russia reflect a state of glowing official and public satisfaction over Allied operations on Germany's western front—and are non-committal, as usual, about what Russia intends to do.

But in two reliable sources outside Russia, significantly, there is no apparent uncertainty. The Germans seem anxious to announce that the Russian army once more has started to exterminate them on an offensive scale; and Allied headquarters are confident that when the right time comes Joe Goebbels will have something besides the western front to explain to his countrymen.

Russia's role in the war thus far has been played according to Russian needs, just as the other Allies have played their own roles according to their own needs. Presumably, there will be a Russian offensive to drive the Germans further back toward their proper boundaries. But even if there were to be no large-scale offensive this summer—only a massive holding action, with the implied threat of an offensive—Russia, which has borne the brunt of the military machine which was going to conquer the world and now is fighting on the defensive, would need to make no apology.

GERMANS ARE CONFIDENT, TOO

Until the Allies have demonstrated that they are able to maintain and move forward their still tenuous French front, the Germans—militarists and civilians—will have every reason to remain confident.

That is why cautious advisers on the Allied side are warning their people against over-confidence. The real battle in Normandy has not been fought yet. The military operations there are still in the feeling-out stage—the first round.

German leaders warned their people months ago not to expect a first-round knockout. They have made no secret of the strategy of defense against invasion. It calls for initial resistance at the point of attack and the probability that an attack in force will be able to overcome the resistance, whose purpose is to delay the invaders until secondary defense can be organized.

That has been Germany's military project since D-day—organization of secondary defense. The issue now is whether the defense, operating on the principle of attack, will be sufficiently strong to drive the Allies back across the English Channel in a repetition of the evacuation from Dunkirk.

On the Allied side, of course, all this is known and has been taken into consideration. It is obvious that the strategy for dealing with it must call for additional moves to keep the Germans from concentrating on the Normandy invasion. There will be other invasions and threats of invasion. The action in Normandy may become secondary at any moment, or may share the spotlight with some other operation of comparable magnitude.

But until the Allies have established the fact they are able to deal successfully with the ultimate force they must meet in order to maintain a western front, the Germans have a right to feel just as confident of the outcome as the most optimistic believer in Allied success—a fact which should offset the naive and wholly foolish notion that Germany must lose because it has not been able to win the first round of the battle.

THE STARS SAY:

For Wednesday, June 14

THE AUGURIES are excellent for a lively productive and enterprising day even though these are to be rescued from some manner of chaotic, baffling and frustrating circumstances of a stubborn nature. However, the calm marshalling of the energies, sound judgment, practical tactics and swift moves should combine to overcome snares and obstacles, and produce surprising benefits, of substantial and enduring worth. But work with attention to ways and means and not under snap impulses or high nervous tension. Personal and business affairs call for composure. Literary, public and community interests should bring honors.

It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a prosperous, happy and lively year with happiness, good progress and enduring benefits, depending upon shrewdness, practicality, keen insight and sound judgment, supported by quick grasp of peculiar situations or subtleties, which circumvented should produce quite surprising results. Sagacity, alertness and diligence should win, but under calm and systematic moves and not under tension or variable moodiness. Literary matters and new contracts as well as travel are indicated. All work in public welfare should bring rewards of real worth.

A child born on this day should have much energy, enterprise and ingenuity for overcoming obstacles, inhibitions, and subtle snares, attaining success, and happiness, possibly some token of public esteem. Literary ability is shown.

Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.—Exodus.

LADY'S STOMACH WAS LIKE A GAS FACTORY: MEALS TURNED TO GAS

One lady said recently that her stomach used to be like a "gas factory!" That is, when she ate a meal it seemed to turn right into gas. She was always bloated, had awful stomach gas pains, daily headaches and constant irregular bowel action. Now, however, this lady says she is FREE OF STOMACH GAS and she says the change is due to taking ERB-HELP. Her meals agree with her. No gas or bloating after eating. Headaches and constipation are gone. "Oh! what relief!" states this lady. "Why don't other gas and constipation sufferers get ERB-HELP?" ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Poison Ivy Pointers

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE SEASON for poison ivy and poison oak is here again and the woodsman, or the plucker of wild flowers, or even the golfer whose ball happens by an unfortunate accident to get into the rough provided he is susceptible to the ravages of the plant will begin to gaze

Dr. Clendenening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

In suspicious anticipation at the skin of his hands and wonder if that little blister will grow into a great eruption.

Ivy dermatitis affects only susceptible individuals. Many attempts have been made to devise a serum which will produce immunity either for prevention or treatment, but not with any conspicuous success.

Other methods of prevention have been aimed at washing off the resin which the plant leaves on the skin at the earliest possible moment. The offending substance is very sticky and tenacious, so much so that ordinary soap and water will not remove it.

Efficacy of Chemicals Experiments have been made to determine how effective the chemicals often employed to remove the resin from the skin are. The experiments were conducted in the following manner:

Fresh green leaves of the poison ivy plant were gathered by a person not sensitive to the plant. A portion of the leaf was bruised by rolling it between the thumb and each finger, depositing as near as possible an equal amount of oleoresin on each finger. Then a volunteer who was known to be sensitive to poison ivy allowed his skin to be lightly stroked by a finger on which the oleoresin had been deposited. No visible stain or moisture could be seen on the skin of the stroked area but in spite of this, if left alone on the skin of the sensitive person a typical poison ivy dermatitis resulted, going through the stages from redness and inflammation to blister formation.

The first preventive used was laundry soap and running water. In different experiments the contaminated skin was washed at intervals varying at one, five, ten, fifteen, thirty minutes, an hour and two hours after being touched. The results varied with the degree of sensitiveness of the volunteer. Those who were used to having milk attacks were completely prevented from reaction provided the washing was done within one minute. But if as much as five minutes elapsed the eruption was just as severe as if no washing had been done. In a highly sensitive subject no prevention of eruption was accomplished, no matter how soon or how vigorous the washing.

In all of these experiments the volunteer was stroked on both arms. Only one arm was exposed to washing or chemical applications. The other arm was left as a control.

Chloride of Iron Chloride of iron has been used as a preventive application, but in these experiments a 10 per cent solution of ferric chloride applied to the site of contamination at varying intervals did not prevent the subsequent eruption or diminish its severity. An ointment of ferric chloride, calamine (10%), zinc oxide (10%) and talcum applied to the skin before the contamination was made resulted in reduced severity of the eruption.

Potassium permanganate 10% aqueous solution applied in the same way did prevent the eruption in most instances and reduced its severity in nearly all, even if applied as long after exposure as five or 10 minutes. This seems to be the best preparation for this kind of prevention. But in highly sensitive individuals even it fails. Sodium bicarbonate did not prevent the eruption and white petrolatum made it worse due to the solubility of the ivy oleoresin in oily mediums. The reputation which many of these preparations had is based on freedom from discomfort on field trips and under these circumstances no one can be sure that he has really been contaminated by bruised plants. The experiments recorded here were certain and exact.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendenening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendenening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

A Model is Murdered ~ BABS LEE

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

Argus noted the single bed and small bureau in the alcove. The apartment was devoid of bric-a-brac or ornaments of any sort, including pictures and ashtrays. On the opposite side was a closet-like box with cupboards, a small icebox and some shelves. A two-burner electric stove stood on a tin table that sloped.

"Depressing dump, isn't it?" Argus asked.

"See what you think of this," Grange said. He led him to a spot directly opposite the table. There was a hole in the wall about the size of a bullet. "Looks like this is where Redbeard carried on his experiments, all right?"

"Find anything else?"

"Yep," the Inspector opened a closet door. An overcoat hung there. "There's no mark in it," Grange said, "it may take us a long time to trace it, but it's identical with the description of the one Redbeard wore."

Argus felt the material, sniffed it, and then turned one of the pockets inside out, carefully, so as not to spill any of the dust that might be in the bottom.

"I'd like to know what your men find from examining this dust," Argus said. "Particularly if they find any tobacco." He replaced the coat and walked into the bedroom. He pulled back a corner of the bed coverings. The sheets were clean and unwrinkled. The bureau drawers were next. They were bare. A sad looking plant that had not been recently watered stood on a dusty dish on the window-sill. An express box stood on the floor.

"Where's the bathroom?" Argus asked above the din.

"It's down the hall," Grange roared back. "There's one bath to each floor."

Argus examined the surface of the refectory table, with its red velvet cover. There was a mark on the velvet as though something heavy had been laid on it. There were two floor plugs behind the telephone bell box. There were tiny scratch marks on it as though someone had tried to take it apart with a sharp instrument and it had slipped, marring the paint. On the carpet was a tiny sliver of glass.

Argus picked it up.

"Better take a dust combing around this table," he said.

"Okay. Find something?"

Argus put the glass into Grange's hand. Then he went into the kitchenette. There was dust on the shelves, in the glasses, and dishes. There was a red garbage pail next to the tin table. He lifted the lid. The inside pail was missing.

"What's your theory, Inspector?" the detective asked.

"Well," said Grange, pulling at his chin, "we know that Sturgis was in love with Syria and jealous of her. And he was clever about inventing things. Sturgis walked with a limp so did Redbeard. Sturgis, by his own admission, was in the vicinity of 29th Street and Fourth Avenue the day Redbeard bought his disguise."

"If Sturgis was Redbeard," Argus suggested, "the kid that picked up the beard at Western Union might be able to identify him. But there's another problem: Assuming that Sturgis was our man, who shot him and who shot Flagg?"

"Yes," Grange sighed. "I've thought of that, too. But Sturgis seemed like such a logical Redbeard, everything about him fits so well with what we already know, that I figured there must be some simple explanation if we could just think of it."

"Perhaps," Argus said, unconvinced.

Grange's face brightened. "Or maybe Sturgis knew who Redbeard was and followed him up here, threatened him, and was shot."

"That sounds more likely," Argus nodded. "I'd like to have a talk with the super. And, if I may make a suggestion, don't let any one smoke in this room until you've taken up the dust from around the table."

The superintendent turned out to be a genial Swede with a clean apartment in the basement. He seemed more than anxious to answer questions.

"This man Stoffsky came to you on Thursday afternoon to rent 2F," Argus began.

"Yes. He came 'bout six o'clock to look over the place," he said in a sing-song voice. "Then he pay me the rent in advance and say he move in Friday."

"And did he?"

"Yes."

"Can you describe him?"

"Sure. He about as tall as you and he have a reddish beard and glasses. He wear a loose overcoat and a dark felt hat and he walk with a limp. When he talk he talk like a refugee. He speak with accent."

"Notice anything about his hands? Any rings—or a watch?"

"He wearing gloves every time I see him. I don't know about any watch."

"When he paid the rent did he sign anything?"

"No."

"How about that phone upstairs? Did Stoffsky put that in?"

"The phone already in, but he had a man come in and turn it on."

"When?"

"When he move in he tell me to expect phone man and he give me ten dollars to pay him, and tell me to sign for it. The man came Saturday."

"Was Stoffsky here?"

"No. He went out. I let the man in and stay while he connect it."

Argus sat forward in his chair. "When you were in the apartment did you see anything unusual?"

The Swede scratched his blond head. "Come to think of it, by yimminy, there was a machine standing on the table. The phone man say it was an air-cooler."

"Did you examine it?"

"No. I never touch nothin'."

"Was there anything else?"

"I don't remember nothin'."

"Did this Stoffsky have anyone to clean up for him?"

"No. He didn't want anyone to go near his apartment after that."

"Did you throw out any refuse from his rooms?"

"No."

"The garbage pail is missing from his kitchen. Do you know where it is?"

"No. Maybe it's in the dumb-waiter. I ain't had time to clean up today."

As the man pulled down the dumb-waiter from another floor, Argus continued with his questioning.

"Did Stoffsky tell you his initials or first name when he took the place?"

"He say his name was Eric Stoffsky."

"Eric Stoffsky," Argus repeated slowly and shook his head. "When was the last time you saw him?"

"He came in around 8:30 last night."

"How many times did you see him in all?"

"I see him Thursday when he took the place and Friday when he moved in with a suitcase. That was around six. He come in Monday night at 5:30 and last night."

"Did any of your tenants report hearing a shot during the time Stoffsky lived here?"

"Naw, mister. The El make so much noise anyway—" He shrugged. "Then the trucks always back-firing." He had the dumb-waiter down now and was removing the pail. He set it down on the floor near Argus' feet. The latter bent to examine it.

There were a few pieces of broken glass wrapped in a newspaper. In the upper left hand corner, torn through the middle, was a sticker with the last letters of a name and address. Argus peered at it closely. The letters were: "an" and underneath was "Rd." and under that "ey". The other contents of the pail were a piece of twine and some small bits of wire.

"I'm glad you hadn't emptied this," Argus said. "I'll just keep it for a while."

"Miss Kitty won't like this at all," the superintendent shook his head slowly.

"Miss Kitty? Who's she?" Argus asked.

"She's the lady whose apartment he rented. Miss Kitty's a member of some society that don't approve of drinkin' or smokin' and she goes south and I rent her place for her. She tell me she want some responsible person in it, was her very words." He shook his head again. "She'll blame me when she finds out I rent it to a murderer."

The Swede looked horrified. Argus could not decide whether it was because of Stoffsky or whether he feared Miss Kitty's wrath.

The Story of Ex-Tanes

An important report to the men and women of America

For 33 months the facts of this report have been withheld from publication for strategic reasons.

During those 33 months, Sohio refineries have been producing a group of highly critical super-fuel ingredients which we call EX-TANES.

EX-TANES are extremely powerful petroleum molecules—power so concentrated that a few cupfuls added to a gallon of high-octane gasoline transforms it into the world's highest grade fighting fuel...

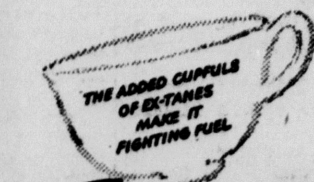

Power so concentrated that gasoline stepped up with these "miracle molecules" makes possible as much as a third bigger bomb loads—20% faster climb and 45% greater range for fighter planes.

Before Pearl Harbor, one Sohio plant was equipped for this desperately important job. Today, Sohio's output of EX-TANES flows from all Sohio plants to 10 other refiners in the United States and to our Allies, and all types of Allied aircraft are now powered with gasoline energized by "the added cupfuls" of EX-TANES.

The work of thousands of men and women of Sohio has made this record achievement possible.

We believe that their part in helping to hasten the end of this war—in giving an additional plus in power to our heroic men of the air—is one of the outstanding production stories in Ohio...

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 13.—President Roosevelt would be justified in vetoing the price control extension legislation, in its present form, in the opinion of Rep. Wolcott of Michigan, Republican leader of the house banking committee.
Wolcott and some others want the controversial Bankhead cotton amendment thrown out of the bill. This clause would adjust textile prices to guarantee parity to cotton farmers. The senate has approved it and the house committee probably will act on it today. And meanwhile, some veteran lawmakers privately express the opinion that if the President does veto the measure as inflationary, he might turn to his war powers to maintain price control.

WAR DEBT
Finland's going to pay the June 15 installment on her World War I debt to the United States although she is fighting Russia, at war with Britain and the relations between her and this nation are strained. Her legation said today she wants to use her funds in this country to make the $140,000 payment. Finland still owes us about $9,000,000.

TAXES
Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the senate finance committee says preliminary work is already under way to bring down corporate and individual tax rates after the war. Plans are aimed at placing the levies on a "reasonable, moderate level."

U. N. R. E. A.
The foreign economic administration is opposing a threatened congressional cut of $350,000,000 in the initial U. S. contribution to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration. Chief Leo T. Crowley says it would "cripple" the agency just as it is needed most.

DOCTORS
The War Manpower commission is reviewing its list of physicians previously classified as "over-age" by the Army and Navy. Those who can be spared now will be offered the chance to apply for commissions with the understanding they will be assigned to the Veterans' administration.

YANKS GAIN

signal "for starting the obviously impending battle for Caen has not been given on either side," but that both the Allies and Germans were bringing up "special units." The town of 61,000 population is the eastern bastion of the Germans' Normandy line.

Supreme headquarters in its 15th communique said small Allied gains were registered in all but one sector, at Tilly-sur-Seuilles, where strong resistance continued. The Germans were said to have brought up armored reinforcements.

American doughboys pushed on across the neck of the Cherbourg peninsula for some miles beyond newly-captured Carantan, possession of which, the communique said, "materially strengthens the link established between our two major beachheads."

Tank Battles Continue
Rommel was reported concentrating fresh troops around St. Lo, target of American forces driving southwestward from the Cerisy forest, fully occupied yesterday by doughboys who there reached a point 18 miles or more from the landing beaches.

German reinforcements also were rushing up the west coast of the peninsula toward Cherbourg to halt the American drive toward the opposite shore from the Carantan and Montebourg areas.

Very heavy tank battles continued in the British-Canadian sector on the Allied left flank. It was estimated here that a fourth of the entire German western front strength of 60 divisions of more than 1,000,000 men now have been thrown against the American, British and Canadian forces.

The enemy high command was said to be relying on a patchwork defense, a policy of throwing in reserves at the most threatened points—a clear indication, Supreme headquarters said, that the Germans do not know Allied strategy and fear other strong offensive thrusts and new landings.

O. K. CONSTRUCTION OF THREE AIRPORTS

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 13.—Three Ohio airports had a presidential green light today for resuming construction designed to fit them for emergency use. The fields originally were recommended for inclusion in an army program but work was stopped subsequently.
The airports are at Canton, Mansfield and Springfield.
The Civil Aeronautics administration said last night the municipalities sponsoring the fields already had entered into site purchases and made other commitments and that little if any critical material will be required to complete the work.
A special congressional committee had appealed to President Roosevelt in behalf of the projects. A total of 27 such projects were approved for the nation. Fourteen others required for specific military purposes also were approved.

Assembly Line Homes Make Strong Bid For Top Role In Post-War Housing Jobs

By SCHUYLER ALLMAN
AP Feature Writer

NEW YORK—The prefabricated house—which even a British prime minister mistakenly believes is something cooked up quickly in a factory and served all in one helping—is likely to be a big factor in post-war building.

That is the considered opinion of the committee on postwar reconstruction of the American Institute of Architects, which argues that greater use of prefabrication should be encouraged for economy reasons. If the post-war builder prefers a traditional house or a patio house, or one of modern functional design—as a recent survey by Small Homes Guide indicates—then prefabrication can provide it.

Prefabricators thus were dismayed, says Arthur C. Holden, vice chairman of the committee, when Prime Minister Churchill recently rose to the microphone for a discussion on British housing problems and classed prefabricated houses as emergency buildings.

Built In Factory
On the walls of Holden's office are pictures of various houses, some of them prefabricated, all having the same sturdy, permanent air. All that prefabrication means, he says, is the manufacture in the factory of as much of the house as possible—windows, doors, wall and floor panels, and the like.

Prefabrication does not have to present the facade of a barracks. If you want stone veneer, or brick, or clapboard siding, you can have it.

on the use of building materials. In the interest of fire-prevention, many cities require brick and plaster or tile and plaster walls in certain areas, and will not allow the use of new fireproof panels of asbestos and other such material.

Lightweight Metal Use
"Architects," says the committee, "should be freed from the damaging effect of trade restrictions, combinations to prevent the introduction of new methods and materials, and archaic, over-restrictive and too specific building codes." Such factors may retard development of materials like plastics and pressed wood, Holden contends.

Greater use of light-weight metals in post-war home construction is considered certain, since they have been in heavy production at war industry demand.

The committee in a recent report also promises to help make home building less costly, and said:

"It is for architects to lead in a movement really to cut housing costs all along the line, from the cost of construction . . . to the costs of land, of taxation and of finance."

Mr. and Mrs. America Study This Picture

Sgt. William Barbero, while taking the picture of his buddies who died to take Hill 700 in the far off Southwest Pacific, expressed a desire that it be published in the United States to arouse the folks back home to the fact that our boys are dying for them. Here, Sergeant, is the picture for all to see. Other pictures he made of that fight were so grisly—and in some instances so clear that recognition may have been possible so the Army has restricted them. Look again and buy War Bonds today.

WMC REGULATIONS IN EFFECT TODAY

Sweeping new man power regulations announced by Regional WMC Chairman Robert C. Goodwin for Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky, went into effect yesterday. The regulations, issued in conformity with an administrative order of WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt, put a stop to all gate hiring of male workers 17 years of age and older, unless such hiring is specifically authorized by the United States Employment Service. In the 24 tight labor market areas in the region—those classified as in Group 1 or Group 2—the regulations also require the application of employment ceiling, limiting the numbers of male workers individual employers may have on their payrolls.

"These regulations mean," Goodwin explained, "that male workers no longer can be hired by an employer solely on the basis of a statement of availability. After the effective date of the regulations, no employer can legally hire any male worker unless he is referred to that employer by the USES, or the USES has entered into specific arrangements with the employer to permit him to hire at the gate. Workers, therefore, will normally be able to get jobs only through the United States Employment Service."

No employer located in a tight labor market area will be permitted to hire male workers in excess of the number specifically allowed him by the War Manpower commission. "We are now at the point of rationing male labor," Goodwin stated. "We are short thousands of male workers in this region and we can meet the urgent production schedules upon which the success of our armed forces depends only by allocating the short supply in such a way that none is wasted and that the most urgent manpower requirements are met ahead of all others. This is the objective of the whole extended program. It is designed to direct the flow of labor where it is most needed in the interest of the war effort and to keep it from being wasted in unnecessary activities."

Can You Picture
without Transportation?

Public transportation—by highway and skyway, by railway and waterway—is one of the most vital industries of this State of ours. It represents far more than a vast array of terminals, equipment, repair shops and cold statistics about moving manpower—it's the link that joins Ohio's cities and towns and rural communities to each other and to the rest of the Nation. In these tense times, it is the means of bringing boys home on furlough—of getting workers to the war plants—of keeping on the move all those people whose travel is essential to Victory.

An estimated 150,000 of our fellow citizens of Ohio are hard at work on the 47 railroads and the 5 airlines serving Ohio, on boats, barges, huge fleets of trucks, and on the 221 inter-city bus lines which operate 1,269 buses along 13,885 miles of routes within our State borders. No small share of the credit for the efficiency of this excellent transportation system belongs to the Ohio Department of Commerce and the O.D.T.

We who keep Greyhound buses rolling across our State are conscious of the importance of our particular job—to the whole system of wartime transportation. Without the buses doing their share of the job other transportation would be burdened beyond capacity.

Many of our people today are serving in the Armed Forces—the rest of us are doing our level best to keep essential highway travel safe and efficient.

But we're also thinking about and planning for the post-war days, when pleasure travel will return and when such travel in new and finer Super-Coaches will be a greater pleasure than ever.

DEATHS

DORSEY H. KING
LISBON, June 13.—Dorsey Hastings King, 80, died at his home, 506 W. Washington st., at 8:30 a.m. Monday.
Mr. King had lived here 14 years, coming from Millport. He was a lifelong member of the Presbyterian church. He and his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Nelson King, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last March 28.
Surviving, besides his wife, are two sons, Wilson of Cleveland and Edwin of Millport; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Stroupe, of Canton; a brother, Wesley King, of Millport; a sister, Miss Jane King, of Minerva, and seven grandchildren.
Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

KATHERINE BURKEY
Funeral service was held at the Orr Funeral home in Youngstown Saturday for Katherine Betty Louise Burkey, 14, of Hubbard, who died Wednesday in the Youngstown South Side hospital following a three years illness of rheumatic fever.
She was the sister of Mrs. Gerald Sanor, R. D. 1, Salem, and visited frequently with the family here.
Also surviving are three sisters, two brothers and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burkey of Hubbard. She was born Jan. 25, 1930 in Keys, O.

LISBON FIRM FILLS BOND QUOTA EARLY

LISBON, June 13.—Probably the county's most quickly filled bond quota was recorded here yesterday when officials of the Wright File Co., employing about 200 people—reported their $14,000 goal fully subscribed at 10 a. m., the time set for the opening of the Fifth War Loan drive.
Officials explained their rapid-fire subscription as being due entirely to the invasion opening. They said workers knew what the company goal was going to be and raised their share immediately after the invasion news came in. Consequently, when the bond drive opened here yesterday, the company had filled its allotment.
Most of the 200 workers are women.

New Executive at Willys
TOLEDO, June 13.—Ward M. Canaday, chairman of the board of Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., confirmed yesterday that Charles E. Sorenson, formerly associated with the Ford Motor Co., has been named chief executive officer of Willys. Canaday said Sorenson would be elected president of the company soon.

Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's invasion army in Burma has been reinforced by a crack formation of U. S. ordnance medium tanks.

Tommy Tank Crews Take a Rest Before New Thrust

FINLAND'S EXIT

lency in lashing out at a subordinate enemy. If they can neutralize Finland quickly, thus eliminating the threat to the Red's northern flank, the Russians naturally will be in better position for a drive against the enemy elsewhere.
Furthermore, if able to base their planes in Finland, the Russians would strengthen their hand against German positions in the Baltic states. Soviet warships and submarines would be free to work out of the gulf of Finland, which the Germans have laced with elaborate anti-submarine nets.

Another obvious purpose of the drive is to cut German's supply lines to far northern Finland, forcing the Nazis to use the more dangerous route around Norway, and making more hazardous German iron ore shipments through the gulf of Bothnia.

Reports from Stockholm and even from Berlin say the Finns admit frankly they stand little chance against the Red army offensive, launched two months after the Helsinki government rejected Moscow's armistice terms.

Discovery near Ypsilanti, Mich., of a 100-foot gravel vein containing water, probably the thickest water-bearing vein ever found in Michigan, has been announced by the geological survey division of the conservation department.

Gen. Clark Congratulates Yank Soldiers in Rome

ROME, June 13.—Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark told his Fifth army troops today they had broken the German armies opposing them in Italy and "it is no wonder they are in full flight."

"You men who captured Rome, I want to congratulate you from the bottom of my heart," Clark said in welcoming British, French and American troops of the Fifth army to a spacious new rest center on the outskirts of Rome.

Urging the men to visit and study places of historic interest in Rome, Clark added, "Watch your step. Don't raise too much hell."

Soldier Is Fever Victim

EAST LIVERPOOL, June 13.—Pvt. Donald L. Petty, 27, died of typhus fever May 29 in India, the War department advised his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Petty.

A greenhouse employee, he was inducted Jan. 21, 1940, and had been overseas 27 months.

Since 1939 American labor has constructed and equipped about $20 billion worth of war plants and facilities.

BOMBERS

assault by 1,400 American heavy bombers, the RAF included in its overnight targets bridges near Caen, center of some of the heaviest fighting in the Allied invasion drive, and Cologne in western Germany—an important railway hub.

Nazi Plane Reaches London

The Luftwaffe, evidently trying to save face after its weak showing in Normandy, sent a few planes over southern and eastern England, and got one lone plane through to London for the first time since April 27.

The campaign against German transport, which reached a new crescendo yesterday, went on through the night, virtually unabated at the hands of heavies, mediums and Mosquitos and expanded eastward into the lowlands.

The RAF bombed railroad centers at Arras, Amiens and Cambrai—key points on the route from Flanders to Normandy—and Poitiers, France.

Mediums augmented the assault with a blow at the great Panzer marshalling area in the forest de Grimbois, southwest of Caen, dropping 150 tons on German armored concentrations in a few minutes with great devastation.

They also hit the railroad center at Meudon, and ferry installations over the Seine at Caudebec, in a continuation of the campaigns against ferries, apparently calculated to prevent the Nazis from staging a successful "Dunkelquer" if Allied forces succeeded in trapping them.

Faces Grand Jury

LISBON, June 13.—Earl Little of R. D. Lisbon was bound over to the grand jury under $300 bond at a hearing last night before Justice of the Peace Felix P. Butch. He pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a pump and motor from a coal mine owned by Dave Evans of Lisbon.

Wife Indicted for Murder

NEWARK, June 13.—Mrs. Margaret Neighbarger, 40, was indicted yesterday by the Licking county grand jury on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the slaying of her husband, Harry Neighbarger, 37, June 3, as he returned home from work.

Win Army-Navy 'E'

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The Army-Navy "E" for outstanding production was awarded yesterday by the two military departments to the Mansfield Tire and Rubber Co., Mansfield, O., and Oak Rubber Co., Ravenna, O.

The foundations of the Italian city of Terracina date to 500 B.C.

American Soldiers In London Tracing English Ancestry

(By United Press)
LONDON, June 13.—The English ancestors of United States servicemen in Britain are part of the wartime job of Mrs. Kathleen Broomfield, attractive brunette secretary of the Society of Genealogists.

At least 30 United States servicemen a week call at the headquarters of the society in London to know more about their family tree. They are turned loose in the library to do their own research.

The society has just finished the micro-filming of 9,000 parish registers—it has another 2,000 to cover to complete the filming of the entire historic church registers of Britain—and copies are available to United States servicemen who can peruse them at leisure during leave periods.

Many of the Americans who have been able to contact distant relatives, unknown to them until they get in touch with the society, would have been disappointed in their quest but for the foresight of the society in filming the registers before some of them were destroyed by fire and water during the Battle of Britain.

Mrs. Broomfield has discovered that no particular county or city can claim to have more American descendants than any other. "There is no county in the land which is not claimed by some keen American visitor as the origin of his family," she said.

"The micro-filming of parish registers has helped to end the quest of many United States soldiers and altogether many thousands of Americans have found their English 'cousins' since American troops first came here."

ON THE HEELS OF ALLIED INVADERS

THESE MEN BELONG to the Civil Affairs group, made up of hand-picked officers and enlisted men of the British and American armies, which will follow hot on the heels of Allied invasion forces to restore free government of liberated areas and do the actual governing outright in Germany. At top left is Maj. John C. Diggs, public works officer, formerly field supervisor in national parks service. Top right, Capt. Allan Westervelt, La Canada, Cal., communication officer, who was with the Bell Telephone company before the war. Lower left, Maj. Benjamin J. Scheinman of Los Angeles. Lower right, Lieut. Stephen Elwin Ware, Wichita, Kan., assistant legal officer. They are training somewhere in Britain. (International)

Bank Deposits In Ohio Show Increase

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, June 13.—Fat pay checks have built up deposits in Ohio financial institutions until assessments against them up to June 7 were almost $1,500,000 greater than at the same time in 1943.

William S. Evatt, state tax commissioner, also announced yesterday that the $8,298,635 in assessments against deposits this year were almost double those of the pre-war year of 1939 when they totaled $4,377,384.

Another example of the steadily increasing bank accounts of Ohioans was the fact total taxable deposits, plus a reasonable estimate of non-taxable deposits last Nov. 10 were $5,149,317,500 as compared with $4,150,878,000 at the corresponding time in 1942.

Evatt said $6,646,155 of the tax up to June 7 were assessed against banks, building and loan associations, credit unions for $23,461.

Although the tax is assessed against deposits it is paid by the financial institutions themselves.

and supplies to the Cherbourg peninsula. They also were disrupting the lines of approach to the potential invasion points at which the Allies may strike at any time. The German air force showed up in greater strength than at any time since the invasion—but it was a weak display.

This intensified Allied air attack emphasizes a vital point which we should keep in mind. The reason we are able to invade western Europe through Hitler's powerful defenses is because of two things:

The Allies have vast air superiority; they have vast sea superiority.

HAD THE HITLERITES been able to challenge us heavily on these two cardinal points, there would have been a far different story. It might easily have had a bad ending for this greatest amphibious invasion attempt of history. Certainly there would have been a battle so destructive as to appal the world.

Hitler's lack of air power is his most dangerous immediate weakness, as is being well exemplified in the fighting on the peninsula. Not only has Nazi Field Marshal Rommel been handicapped in actual battle, but he has been unable to protect troop and supply movements to the peninsula, for despite the bad weather the Allied fleets have performed a wonderful service. The result is that Rommel has lost invaluable time in hitting the invading forces when they were in their most dangerous position.

The German Luftwaffe in western Europe is reported to consist of some 1,750 fighter planes and maybe 500 bombers—a mere handful compared with the 11,000 warplanes which the Allies have announced they are using. Probably the Nazis are holding their depleted fleet for some crisis which they fear. To have flung it into the battle of Cherbourg would have meant its annihilation.

In any event, we know that they can't challenge Allied superiority in air and on sea, and that means they can't halt the ultimate establishment of a second front, although they may have their local successes.

Ted Lewis Honored
